01:27:48 Kristen Downs: Deepti, very good and important question, thank you. Unfortunately we did not have a person with disabilities or a representative from an OPD in our first workshop. That is a group to whom we'll need to reach out further and invite to our future workshops. Do you have any insights or experience working with persons with disabilities or OPDs in DRR? Would love to hear if you can share more.

01:29:38 Kristen Downs: C. Masson, thank you for sharing those resources. I'm copying them down and will distribute to our teams.

01:32:45 Kristen Downs: C. Masson, I'm looking at the Coastal Hazard Wheel and it looks very detailed and interesting. Do you have any recommendations of how to apply it?

01:33:06 Deepti Karan Weiss: Thank you Kristen. In fact I do have experience serving the disability sector in DRR/emergency response in Fiji and currently part of Asia Pacific Disability Constituency Capacity Building Working Group.

01:36:56 Kristen Downs: Thank you, Deepti. Sounds like have a wealth of valuable experience. Will follow up offline.

01:45:23 Muhammad Arain: (Question for Mr. Bofo) Have there been any substantial foreign-sponsored projects relating to the water drainage systems in Ghana which may aid alleviate risks of flooding? In relation to the 2015 Accra floods, has any serious institutional action taken to prevent future improper planning? Thanks.

01:59:39 C. Masson: For DR3 project purposes, are there standard definitions for: 'vulnerability,' 'risk management,' 'resilience', and 'adaptation'? Or, are these terms stakeholder/context/site specific?

02:00:10 Irena Zubcevic: Standardized impact data is key in my view. What are the concrete measures that would encourage collection of such data?

02:01:08 Zafar Adeel: Irena: Investment into centralized data repositories is something we're advocating (as a recommendation from our project).

02:01:47 Taija PerryCook: Will a recording of this meeting be available?
