A Message from the Chair of Stakeholder Forum

In 2005, Stakeholder Forum brought out a book on Human and Environmental Security for the UN World Summit 2005 and in 2006 refocused its work around issues that address human and environmental security. The paradigm of 'human and environmental security', perhaps better to call it 'human, economic and environmental insecurity' brings a new urgency to environmental issues, offering an agenda for change. By highlighting the inextricable links between the environment, the economy, human health, and human security, it reveals that business as usual is not an option.

In April 2007, the UK Government took part of this agenda to the UN Security Council for the first time. They initiated the first debate on the environmental issue of energy and climate security. This was followed in June by the Belgian government taking the issue of illegal exploitation of natural resources and armed conflict to the UN Security Council.

In August, the World Business Council on Sustainable Development launched its Global Water toolkit, which is a device utilized by companies and organizations to map their water use and assess risks relative to their global operations and supply chains. The toolkit looks to the future impacts of climate change on water availability for companies up to 2025.

In October UNEP launched their Global Environmental Outlook 4 Report, which also highlighted a future scenario of Human and Environmental Security as one of four possible futures we may be facing.

The emerging issue of Human Security should be seen in the context of the continuing debates regarding international environmental and sustainable development, which Stakeholder Forum and its partners, Brazilian Forum of NGOs and Social Movements for the Environment and Development (FBOMS), Northern Alliance for Sustainability (ANPED) and UN non-governmental liaison service (UN NGLS) have continued to track. It is clear that there is a need for the world to come together to address the new agenda.

Last year, Stakeholder Forum called for a UN Summit on Human, Economic and Environmental Insecurity. In September 2007 Brazil offered to host Rio+20, which would enable governments to at last focus on reforming the environment and sustainable development architecture, and to be able to address the issues confronting us in the twenty-first century. The offer has yet to be formally presented at the UN but when it is Stakeholder Forum will be there to support it

A Message from the Executive Director

In 2007 Stakeholder Forum has continued to work on the issue of Human Economic and Environmental Insecurity. In April we responded to the debate initiated by the UK Government in the UN Security Council on Energy and Climate Security with an article on the BBC web site. Although keen to see the debate prosper we share the perspective of Group of 77's coalition of developing countries, that the debate should include all countries and not be restricted to UN Security Council members.

With our partners Brazilian Forum of NGOs and Social Movements for the Environment and the Development (FBOMS), ANPED and UN Non Governmental Liaison Service, Stakeholder Forum has continued to work on the area of international environmental governance. This year has seen the continuation for the process on IEG:

- The follow up to the Secretary-General's High Level Panel on UN System Wide Coherence in the Areas of Development, Humanitarian Assistance, and Environment;
- The publishing of the Building Blocks paper from the Informal consultations on reform of international environmental governance in the General Assembly;

In addition, and in collaboration with our partners, Stakeholder Forum been following and inputting into two other IEG processes ;1) UNEO: The French Government who have held a number of consultations through the Friends of UNEO on the possibility of a new Agency on the environment 2) IEG: The Brazilian Government have initiated a further process on IEG.

This year there has been a concerted effort on the part of Stakeholder Forum and our partners to initiate a debate on sustainable development governance including the reform of the CSD. It transpired that we were ahead of the curve as the UN Commission on Sustainable Development ground to a halt in May failing to agree anything for the first time ever. We hope that the new Director when appointed will be able to transform what is one of the most important bodies in the UN into a more effective body.

In August at World Water Week, Stakeholder Forum with the Stockholm International Water Institute launched a Global Public Policy Network on Water Management. This GPPN will help prepare governments and stakeholders for the review of CSD-13 decision on water management. It is a new model of preparation as the Steering Committee is made up of 5 governments, UN Water and a number of more traditional stakeholders. It hopes to set an example for how to approach future reviews.

In October Stakeholder Forum facilitated the global media launch for UNEP's flagship report the Global Environmental Outlook 4 (GEO4) Report and an accompanying Brundtland seminar series to review progress in the past twenty years as well as looking at four scenarios for the future. The event was a huge media success with eight TV channels sending crews and the whole front pages of the Times and the Independent. One of the key outcomes of the event was the warning that the issue of climate change should not consume all debates regarding environmental sustainability. GEO4 Achim Steiner the Executive Director of UNEP said he hopes will be the "last wake up call the earth needs." Stakeholder Forum will be working with many of the stakeholders who attended the day on a program of work to look at the scenarios as a preparation for Rio+20.

Stakeholder Forum's Key Achievements in 2007

Stakeholder Forum's mission is to inform, influence, promote and advance sustainable development. In 2007, Stakeholder Forum furthered this mission by:

Building political momentum to strengthen institutions for sustainable development governance through:

Ensuring civil society input to the debate on UN reform for Environment and Sustainable Development. Stakeholder Forum and its partners FBOMS (Brazil), ANPED, UN NGLS, managed an ongoing dialogue and a set of workshops with stakeholders and governments on international environmental governance. As a result of these consultations with partners and stakeholders, in September Stakeholder Forum was asked to address the Informal General Assembly meeting on the Swiss and Mexican Ambassador's Building Blocks paper.

Informing the debate on reform of the Commission on Sustainable Development Stakeholder Forum and its partners continued to push forward on the need for reform of the UN Commission on Sustainable Development. They hosted a number of workshops and in light of the failure of the CSD to agree any text this year. The suggestions put forward by the partners are being looked at seriously by governments.

Initiating a discussion with stakeholders on the possible setting up of an United Nations Environment Organization. With ANPED and UN NGLS, Stakeholder Forum hosted a series of meetings and discussions on the proposed UNEO and in particular what role stakeholders might have in such a body if it were created. This process involved a meeting of stakeholders with the new French Foreign Minister in September 2007.

Building capacity to engage in debate on UN reform for environment and sustainable development, through ieg dossier, an online clearing house dedicated to providing information on intergovernmental negotiations and processes related to the strengthening of the United Nation's environment and development architecture.

Strengthening the implementation of sustainable development commitments on water through:

Launching at World Water Week a new Global Public Policy Network (GPPN) to engage major stakeholders in preparing a review of the implementation of water and sanitation commitments made at CSD13. The GPPN is managed by Stakeholder Forum and Stockholm International Water Institute, and its Steering Committee includes five governments, UN Water, and key stakeholder groups. The Network will contribute to looking at the reasons why commitments have not been implemented and make suggestions on the way forward.

Engaging stakeholders in the Preparatory Process of the Second Intergovernmental Review Meeting of the Global Programme of Action for the Protection of the Marine Environment from Land-based Activities. At UNEP Governing Council Stakeholder Forum in collaboration with the UNEP GPA Office presented feedback on the Beijing Conference.

Building the capacity of stakeholders to engage in environmental decision-making processes through:

The publishing of Negotiating and Implementing Multilateral Environmental Agreements: A Manual for NGOs. The objective of the Manual is to both strengthen multi-stakeholder participation and increase political momentum for effective MEA development, implementation and enforcement. It was published in May 2007.

Building the Capacity of Stakeholders to Engage in Sustainable Development Decision-making Processes

Strengthening Stakeholder Participation in Environmental Negotiations

The fifteen years since the 1992 Earth Summit has seen a vast expansion in the number and scope of multilateral agreements on the environment (MEAs). There are currently more than 700 in force. These MEAs form the building blocks of an emerging and much needed global system of environmental and sustainable development governance. However, MEA negotiations themselves represent an organic process and they are all continuing to evolve. There remains a substantial implementation gap which is crucial to their success.

A second major change has been the expansion of the role that nongovernmental organizations (NGOs) play in the international negotiation of MEAs, and then in their national and local application. The scope and diversity of stakeholder involvement is adding immense value and energy to the worldwide effort to address the critical challenges facing the environment and sustainable development.

Stakeholder Forum, in a partnership of the UNEP Division of Environmental Policy Implementation and Environmental Law (DEPI), Earth Media and Centro de Estudios Ambientales, produced a manual on How to Lobby at Multilateral Environmental Agreements. The goal of the Manual is to:

- Strengthen multi-stakeholder participation, and;
- Increase political momentum for effective MEA development, implementation and enforcement.

The Manual was launch in May 2007 and is designed as a working model of an interactive workshop for NGOs that can help them build the requisite skills to effectively influence all phases of the process of implementation MEAs at the international, national and local levels.

Organizing a training workshop for the first ever joint North and South Cyprus stakeholder team to be able to attend and be effective at the United Nations Commission on Sustainable Development.

In March, working with the UNDP Action for Cooperation and Trust in Cyprus, Stakeholder Forum organised a training workshop on how to become involved with UN meetings for stakeholders from North and South Cyprus. The objective was to prepare a team for the first ever joint stakeholder delegation to attend a UN meeting. The workshop used the Manual on MEAs as a basis for the training. A delegation of fourteen Cypriot stakeholders then attended the first week of the UN CSD meeting. Stakeholder Forum and UNDP service supported the delegation throughout that week and the new Forum is in the process of becoming a UNEP National Committee.

Acting as Rapporteur for the Civil Society Forum at the Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting in Kampala

Stakeholder Forum was brought in by the Commonwealth Foundation to help professionalize the stakeholder approach to Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting.

This project had Stakeholder Forum acting as rapporteur for the Civil Society Forum. This included facilitating the production of the following documents:

- Summary of the Commonwealth Peoples Forum
- Full Report of the Commonwealth Peoples Forum

Hosting the global media launch for the UNEP flagship Global Environmental Outlook 2007 Report.

Stakeholder Forum is the National Committee for UNEP in the UK and also sits on the Outreach team for UNEP's GEO4. As a result, Stakeholder Forum was asked to organize the global media launch of GEO4 in London for October the 25th. The Report looked back twenty years to the Brundtland Report. The key messages for decision makers were worrying:

- The Earth's surface is warming
- More than two million people globally die prematurely every year due to outdoor and indoor air pollution
- The hole in the stratospheric ozone layer is now the largest it has ever been
- Unsustainable land use and climate change are driving land degradation
- The per capita availability of freshwater is declining globally and the contaminated water remains the greatest single environmental cause of human sickness and death.
- Aquatic ecosystems continue to be heavily exploited putting at risk sustainability of food supplies and biodiversity
- The great majority of well studied species are declining in distribution, abundance or both

The report also looked to the future with four scenarios:

- Sustainability First: the civic, government and private sectors work collaboratively to improve the environment and human well being for all, with a strong emphasis on equity.

- Security First: the government sector and the private sector vie for control in efforts to improve, or at least maintain, human well being for mainly the rich and powerful
- Markets First: the private sector, with active government support, pursues maximum economic growth as the best path to improve the environment and human well being for all.
- Policy First: the government sector, with active private and civil sector support implements strong policies intended to improve the environment and human well being, while emphasizing economic development.
- Stakeholder Forum had organized the previous two global media launches in 1999 and 2002. This year's launch gained enormous press interest including the event being coverage by eight TV crews. The following day the report commanded the whole front page of the Times and the Independent.

Hosting one of the six global Brundtland seminars

To accompany the launch, Stakeholder Forum organized a seminar series which was attended by over 250 stakeholders. Strengthening the implementation of sustainable development commitments on water

Reviewing the Implementation of Commitments on Water

At the 13th session of the Commission for Sustainable Development in 2005 (CSD-13), five water management themes were agreed upon in the CSD-13 decision:

- Access to basic water services
- Integrated water resources management (IWRM)
- Access to basic sanitation
- Sanitation and hygiene education
- Wastewater collection, treatment and reuse

It was decided at CSD-13 that at the CSD-16 in 2008 there would be a review of progress towards the commitments on water management outlined in the CSD-13 decision. In preparation for this review at CSD-16, the CSD Secretariat has called for national governments to report across all five of the above themes. This has incorporated a specific questionnaire regarding planning and implementation of IWRM, and a request for governments to voluntarily provide updated information on national sustainable development strategies (NSDS) and national programmes on indicators for sustainable development.

To supplement this, Stakeholder Forum and Stockholm International Water Institute (SIWI) have set up a Global Public Policy Network (GPPN) to gather inputs from governments and other stakeholders (including civil society and Major Groups) on progress since CSD-13 on water management. The GPPN has a Steering Committee made up of five governments (Germany, Guatemala, Indonesia, UK and the USA), UN Water and a number of key stakeholders (Global Water Partnership, WWF-US, World Business Council on Sustainable Development, World Water Forum, and Freshwater Action Network).

The GPPN will attempt to identify consensus on the obstacles facing the implementation of the CSD13 commitments, as well as highlighting examples of progress and best practice. The GPPN will collect, rationalise and disseminate the data relating to water management from relevant stakeholders, with the aim of identifying key areas where action is required to deliver CSD-13 decisions. This process will enable a constructive and positive discussion on water management at the CSD in 2008. The GPPN secretariat will use its findings to brief and inform those taking part in the water management review at CSD-16, which we hope will run for two full days in the first week.

Stakeholder Forum (SF) and Stockholm International Water Institute (SIWI) have designed comprehensive guidelines to encourage broader stakeholder input into the review of water management. We have identified and referenced below the key CSD-13 commitments across the water management themes, focusing specifically on the means of implementation under the following three categories:

- Governance and Capacity Building
 - Monitoring
 - Technology Transfer
- Education, Training, Information and Knowledge
 - Research

Stakeholder and Major Groups Engagement

- Stakeholder Engagement
- Indigenous Knowledge
- Gender

 - Development assistance
 - Commercial Incentives
 - Cost-recovery and Subsidies

Recent trends and emerging issues

The GPPN will help to ensure a successful review of water and sanitation at the CSD, facilitate greater understanding of the linkages between water and other sustainable development issues among policy-makers, and increase cooperation among stakeholders working in the fields of water and sanitation—all of which are essential to speeding up the implementation of water and sanitation commitments to ensure the Millennium Development Goals can be met.

Engaging stakeholders in the Preparatory Process of the Second Intergovernmental Review Meeting of the Global Programme of Action for the Protection of the Marine Environment from Land-based Activities.

The purpose of this project was to ensure stakeholder involvement in the Beijing Conference in October 2006. The project continued reporting back to stakeholders and governments at UNEP Governing Council in February 2007. Working with the UNEP GPA Office Stakeholder Forum organized a workshop to report on the outcomes from the Beijing Conference. Speakers included the Chair of the Beijing Declaration; the Head of the Mexican delegation, Maria Angelica Murillo Correa; Veerle Vandeweerd, Director of UNEP Regional Seas and GPA programme; and Felix Dodds for Stakeholder Forum.

Providing Information on Sustainable Development Processes

Stakeholder Forum's information services support informed participation and involvement of all stakeholders in strengthening global governance for sustainable development.

In 2007 Stakeholder Forum:

- Produced 4 monthly issues of Network. We are currently reviewing the role of a monthly newsletter in light of the amount of information people are receiving to see if this is the best way to communicate with people.
- Produced 10 daily issues of Outreach at CSD-15 with ANPED. Outreach is a daily newsletter produced during UN events which provides commentary on the daily negotiations, as well as policy recommendations and background articles.
- Published an article for BBC News providing a critical analysis of the debate in the UN Security Council on Climate and Energy Insecurity

Stakeholder Forum books

In 2007, Stakeholder Forum brought out the Negotiating and Implementing Multilateral Environmental Agreements: A Manual for NGOs this was a joint publication with UNEP, Earth Media and Centro de Estudios Ambientales (CEDEA). In 2008, we will have published our 11th book in 11 years.

In order to assist the Board and staff to keep in touch with stakeholder views and to ensure that the work remains relevant to their needs and priorities, the Board and staff are assisted by an International Advisory Board (IAB), which advises particularly on SF's work at the international level. In addition, in 2006 Stakeholder Forum established a UK Policy Advisory Panel (UK PAP), which assists stakeholder engagement with UK stakeholders, in particular on SF's work at the UK level. The IAB consists of representatives of leading international stakeholder groups drawn from the major groups recognized by the UN, together with a number of individuals eminent and active in the field of international sustainable development. Membership of the UK PAP similarly consists of representatives of leading UK stakeholder groups and eminent individuals concerned with the promotion of sustainable development at the UK level.
