09:21:52 From Birgilio Rivera to Everyone:

Realistic is that the World doesnt have money and resourses for local level, Nation leaders, Banks, UN departments, Privite Powers and Budget controlers wont leave luxury life for local capacity ans civil society empowerment. CONGRUENCE IS NOT PART OF EACH SECTOR EVALUATIONS. Realistic is that evaluations ARE PARTIAL. As civil society with real productivity interest we are not well evaluated or considered... Government reports and results are always GREAT PLANS (amazing costs with no solutions)... but luxury life for them is a constant never changing story...

So important to highlight the linkages between gender equality and water. SDG 6 is one of the few goals with no specific gender indicators. Very powerful words from Dr. Grace Oluwasanya and from almost all speakers, Carmen Capriles, Tove Lexen, Innocent Menyo and comments and questions from the audience, Aditi Mishal, Elibarick Simon, Lovedonia Skansi...We need to keep attention on this issue. Very grateful for all contributions pointing at what can be done. Looking forward to the conference and more opportunities to expand mindsets our thinking and learn from others.

The most vulnerable and marginalized community like Dalits in South Asia are denied to access to water tap in the community in rural setting due to caste based discrimination. How can SDG amplify the voices of those low caste excluded people ?

- As a case in point to emphasize the connection and interlinkages between Climate Change, Disaster Risk Reduction & Water Resources Management: Climate change is exacerbating the extremes in hydro-meteorological events. 94% of disasters are water-related disasters. Risk reduction, preparation & prevention are sensible investments that pay off in terms of reduced loss of life, avoided damage and long-term economic growth and stability
