08:09:12 From Anthony Reid Harvey to Everyone:
Less developed countries could get Industrialization from the Grassroots, in an environmentally sustainable way. The natural resources tend to be abundant. Skilled potters are ubiquitous. What is primarily needed is training. Here is our presentation of October 4, 2022, to the EU Tech Chamber Manufacturing Alliance.

Here too is an article published in the magazine, Visions for Europe, December 2022. Less Developed Countries that embrace the use of their ceramic resources, i.e., rocks and minerals, will achieve, as entitled, Resource Intensive Industrialization,

Juliana Oliveira

08:28:02 From AKM Anisur Rahman to Everyone:
Julia Oliveira Has mentioned very important point.

08:28:58 From Anthony Reid Harvey to Everyone:

There is a problem that job-seekers flood into the cities. There are important ways to industrialize rural communities that could get the overload of job seekers back to their rural homes. Then they would have livelihoods, and the cities could better support their residents.

08:29:33 From Purna Chitrakar to Everyone:

Problems of urban development in Nepal:

- Absence of an integrated development plan
- Lack of coordination of service providers/government authorities/institutions
- Extreme politicization in development
- Lack of prioritization of work
- When making a five-year strategic plan, lack of survey, lack of data collection
- The five-year plan does not match the policies and plans of each year
- Not arranging sufficient budget for implementing the policy and plan
- Low level of awareness of people representing service providers /government authorities/institutions, not paying serious attention to the concept of development and working on impulse
- Problems such as transparency, accountability, lack of sense of responsibility, widespread corruption can hinder the work of city development.
- Lack of digitization system

08:31:27 From AKM Anisur Rahman to Everyone:

Here in Bangladesh, we are facing with all these kind of issues since long.

08:31:28 From Vincent Ogalo to Everyone:

Reminder: please check Q&A to see if any questions are up your alley and you can provide written answers in real time.

08:42:06 From Anthony Reid Harvey to Everyone:

There is a serious need to employ people to sort the waste. Several categories of waste might be, 1. Recyclable waste, 2. Waste for bio-mass fuel, 3. Waste for energy optimized incineration, 4. Hazardous waste for management and storage. Part of inclusiveness should be small-scale sorting, with the livelihoods implicit.

08:43:38 From Purna Chitrakar to Everyone:

Lack of recycling manufacturing is big problem

08:46:03 From khadija EL Houdi to Everyone:
Recycling should start at home but we aren't there yet? awereness raising is really lacking and government 's will

08:46:20 From MELITON CAPRICH0 to Everyone:
good day from Philippines

08:46:59 From Anthony Reid Harvey to Everyone:
Recycling can be done on a small scale, training people in model and mold making as part of product development. We all agree for the need to recycle but what are the products? This is not only for big business but for lots of small-scale producers.

08:47:11 From George Kinyanjui to Everyone:

08:49:29 From William Charouhis to Everyone:
I met with a composter yesterday who will come to your home, pick up once a month, compost food waste, take recycling, and return composted soil every 6 months. We need governments behind this to defray costs as right now cost is $20 a month some people cannot afford to contribute that.

Aboubakry DIA from Senegal

09:13:15 From Anthony Reid Harvey to Everyone:

Thanks Zeenat! With respects, please recall Schumacher's wonderful book, *Small is Beautiful. * Regarding inclusiveness there is a need to respect and support small-scale entrepreneurs. Many if not most get no support because they cannot contribute substantially to the 2030 quotas of the SDGs. Supporting them does accomplish, however, numerous of the SDGs, e.g., SDG8, Decent work and economic growth.

09:53:44 From Gemma Scott, Recycling & CE Specialist to Charles Nouhan(Direct Message):

must head off - thank you so much for inviting me!

09:55:10 From Anthony Reid Harvey to Everyone:

There is a problem that those who would recycle may see too little profit margin to make this attractive. So, they pursue products that have a better profit margin. Those who would find recycling to be attractive would be the small-scale producers, who otherwise may not have work.

09:56:47 From Ahmad Mahdavi to Everyone:

We still need much work for recycling issues in chemicals industries.
