09:15:54 From Joseph DENOUGBETO : African countries struggle to achieve SDGs 14 and 15 because of the intensive pollution of Africa waters and lands and the offensive desertification caused by toxic pollutants, agricultural inputs..., , Week regulations. One of the UNDP reports on SDG 14 says that organic and chemical pollutions from human activities continue to endanger Africa's marine ecosystem. To this end, it recommends strengthening institutional capacities to enforce laws and regulations relating to the sustainable use of marine resources. Life Under water is an important source of livelihood for many Africa countries, especially the small island Developing States. As for SDG 15, the report notes that loss of forest cover, biodiversity and land degradation remain high and widespread in Africa. This is mainly due to deforestation of lands for agriculture and grazing and climate change. Data shows that land degradation affects 46% of land and 65% of Africa's population, costing the region 9.3 billions dollars a year. Real action is needed

09:16:19 From Charles Nouhan to Pieter van der Gaag, ERF(Direct Message) : Great. We can bring you on for the Q&A.

10:04:58 From Amparo Elisa Rojas Ramirez : Thank you for this wonderfull Exchange!

10:05:26 From Marianna Leite : I highly agree with Prof Elisa Morgera on enabling plural solutions rather than upscalling one model that 'fits all' contexts and cases. I'd only argue that you still need an overaching human rights framework to bring it all together.

10:05:29 From Etta Jackson : I introduce you to our work many of these issues raised as an NGO at: www.icgc.ngo

10:05:31 From Pieter van der Gaag, ERF : Absolutely - the key lies in scaling out what works locally across the region - eg inspire neighbors of succesful projects to adopt those practices. Data gathering in every day people terms can help there. And honestly: seeing how restored soils and ecosystems lead to better incomes really stimulate - locallly

10:08:54 From Hildur Palsdottir : Failed leadership often symptomatic of lack of education and systemic disconnection from nature. Leader's not understanding basic science.

10:09:27 From Krishna chandra Neupane : Good evening from Kathmandu and Good morning to you all. This is Krishna Neupane Local Government Association of Nepal ADCCN

10:13:20 From Diana Papademas : Academics are partnering with local, regional and global institutions to have better grounded data and implementation plans and programs.....we need collaboration across all sectors! We are at the State University of New York/Old Westbury...and are developing a Social and Environmental Justice Institute. I am the Global Center Director. We also are a UNAI Institution, and the Un and NGO's and Civil Society can continue to collaborate to have better research and programs that might impact our political institutions. Thank you for the series.

10:13:26 From Marianna Leite : To corroborate the point Shirleen Chin is making about the Vanuatu initiative re ICJ advisory opinion, there is a similar initiative led by Chile in the Inter-American system. This was based on the ICJ example which shows the power of influence of actions of 'coalitions of the willing'.

10:14:07 From Roy Campbell to Hosts and panelists : The saying goes that the UN has achieved large effects mostly only in small ways, however it has accomplished small measures in great ways. So look horizontally.

10:15:57 From Shirleen Chin : Spotlighting what was mentioned in my concluding remark: the Interim People's Pact for the Future and its set of recommendations: <https://c4unwn.org/wp-content/uploads/2023/05/Interim-Peoples-Pact-for-the-Future-Compressed.pdf>. Happy reading!
